Case No. 25-cv-02847-AMO

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFFS’ MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Re: Dkt. No. 37

This matter comes before the Court on a Motion for Preliminary Injunction filed by Plaintiff nonprofit organizations that provide legal representation to unaccompanied children in immigration courts across the country. Plaintiffs challenge the recent termination of funding for counsel representing unaccompanied children by Defendants the United States Department of Health and Human Services (“HHS”), HHS’s Office of Refugee Resettlement (“ORR”), and the United States Department of the Interior (“DOI”) (collectively, “Government” or “Defendants”). Having considered Plaintiffs’ motion, Defendants’ response, the arguments of the Parties at the April 23, 2025 hearing, and the relevant case law, the Court hereby GRANTS Plaintiffs’ Motion for Preliminary Injunction for the following reasons.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Legal Framework

Congress established a coordinated scheme to govern the legal representation of unaccompanied children in immigration proceedings, a scheme primarily reflected in two statutes: the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (“HSA”) and the William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims

1 Protection Act of 2008 (“TVPRA”). Giving effect to the TVPRA, ORR promulgated the 2 Unaccompanied Children Program Foundational Rule.

3 As relevant to this case, the HSA defines an “unaccompanied alien child” (hereafter 4 “unaccompanied children”) as “a child who – (A) has no lawful immigration status in the United 5 States; (B) has not attained 18 years of age; and (C) with respect to whom – (i) there is no parent 6 or legal guardian in the United States; or (ii) no parent or legal guardian in the United States is 7 available to provide care and physical custody.” 6 U.S.C. § 279(g)(2). Further, the HSA assigns 8 ORR broad authority over the care and custody of unaccompanied children while they are in 9 federal custody. This authority includes coordinating their care and placement, ensuring their best 10 interests in custodial decisions, and developing plans to “ensure that qualified and independent 11 legal counsel is timely appointed to represent the interests of each such child.” 6 U.S.C.
12 § 279(b)(1)(A). These responsibilities are carried out through cooperative agreements and 13 contracts with care providers under ORR policies and oversight. See 6 U.S.C. § 279(b)(1); 31 14 U.S.C. § 6305.

15 Congress enacted the TVPRA to strengthen protections for unaccompanied children.
16 Consistent with the HSA, the TVPRA makes the HHS Secretary responsible for the care and 17 custody of unaccompanied children. 8 U.S.C. § 1232(b)(1). It requires HHS to “ensure, to the 18 greatest extent practicable . . . , that all unaccompanied alien children . . . have counsel to represent 19 them in legal proceedings or matters and protect them from mistreatment, exploitation, and 20 trafficking.” 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5).

21 In April 2024, ORR promulgated the Unaccompanied Children Program Foundational 22 Rule (“Foundational Rule”), codified at 45 C.F.R. Part 410, to establish comprehensive 23 regulations governing programs for unaccompanied children. The Foundational Rule, which 24 became effective July 1, 2024, provides that ORR “shall fund legal service providers to provide 25 direct immigration legal representation for certain unaccompanied children” only “to the extent 26 ORR determines that appropriations are available,” and only if securing pro bono counsel is “not 27 practicable.” 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(4). Other subsections of the Foundational Rule impose 28 obligations – requiring, for example, ORR to ensure unaccompanied children receive mandatory

1 services such as a “presentation concerning the rights and responsibilities of undocumented 2 children,” “information regarding the availability of free legal assistance,” and a “confidential 3 legal consultation.” 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(2)(i)-(v).

4 B. Congressional Funding and ORR’s Termination

5 Since 2012, Congress has consistently appropriated funds for the direct legal 6 representation of unaccompanied children in immigration proceedings, including the most recent 7 appropriation for over $5 billion to ensure “all children . . . have access to counsel in their 8 immigration proceedings.” Compl. ¶¶ 77-87. Congressional appropriations for direct legal 9 representation of unaccompanied children remain available until September 2027, including funds 10 appropriated as recently as March 15, 2025, one week before the Government’s challenged 11 actions. See, e.g., Full-Year Continuing Appropriations and Extensions Act, 2025, Pub. L. 119-4, 12 Div. A Tit. I Sec. 1101(8) (2025); Further Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2024, Pub. L. 118-47, 13 Div. D Tit. I, 138 Stat. 460, 665-666 (2024); S. Rep. 118-84, at 169. Despite funding being 14 available, ORR decided on or about March 20, 2025, to partially terminate the contract funding 15 direct legal representation services. Biswas Decl. (ECF 24-1) ¶¶ 12-13. This termination 16 followed a directive memorandum signed by the Acting Assistant Secretary of the Administration 17 for Children and Families dated February 3, 2025. Id. ¶¶ 13-14; see also Biswas Decl., Ex. 1 18 (ECF 24-2, the “Secretarial Directive”). The Secretarial Directive instructed agency personnel to 19 pause all payments to contractors and vendors related to immigration and refugee resettlement “for 20 payment integrity.” Id. On March 21, 2025, DOI sent a letter to Acacia Center for Justice, the 21 sole contractor for direct representation legal services, terminating the contract line items through 22 which HHS and ORR provided funding for counsel for unaccompanied children in immigration 23 proceedings. Compl. ¶ 11; Biswas Decl. ¶ 12, Ex. 2 (ECF 24-3, the “Cancellation Order”). The 24 Cancellation Order instructed Acacia to “immediately stop all work” on the contract. Id. The 25 Cancellation Order terminated funding for direct legal representation services “for the 26 Government’s convenience” and made no reference to the Secretarial Directive. Id. Acacia 27 notified its direct representation subcontractors, including Plaintiffs, of the Cancellation Order the 28 same day. See, e.g., FIRRP Decl. (ECF 7-4) ¶ 32.

C. Plaintiff Organizations

Plaintiffs include the following organizations: Community Legal Services in East Palo Alto, Social Justice Collaborative, Amica Center for Immigrant Rights, Estrella del Paso, Florence Immigrant and Refugee Rights Project, Galveston-Houston Immigrant Representation Project, Immigrant Defenders Law Center, National Immigrant Justice Center, Northwest Immigrant Rights Project, Rocky Mountain Immigrant Advocacy Network, and Vermont Asylum Assistance Project (collectively, “Plaintiffs”). Plaintiffs previously received funding for their work from ORR disbursed through Acacia Center for Justice. Compl. ¶¶ 64-65; 88. The organizations share the mission of ensuring persons in immigration proceedings, including the uniquely vulnerable population of unaccompanied children, have legal representation. See, e.g., FIRRP Supp. Decl. (ECF 37-5) ¶ 5 (“Since the Florence Project began serving children in 2000, a central tenet of our mission has been that no child should have to stand alone in court.”); NWIRP Decl. (ECF 7-10) ¶¶ 1-2 (Northwest Immigrant Rights Project “provides legal services to unaccompanied immigrant children and youth” in accordance with its “mission to promote justice by defending and advancing the rights of immigrants through direct legal services, systemic advocacy, and community education.”); KIND Decl. (ECF 7-18) ¶ 1 (describing KIND’s “mission [to] ensur[e] that no child appears in immigration court without high-quality legal representation.”); see also Compl. ¶ 102.

In response to the Cancellation Order, and the resulting funding termination, Plaintiffs state that they have been forced to choose between cutting vital organizational programs or dismissing their specialized and seasoned attorneys. See, e.g., GHIRP Supp. Decl. (ECF 53-2) ¶ 3 (describing the layoff of eight staff members due to the Cancellation Order’s termination of funding). Further, the Cancellation Order prevents Plaintiffs from providing thousands of unaccompanied children direct representation, impeding Plaintiffs from ensuring unaccompanied children are supported by legal counsel. See, e.g., Estrella del Paso Supp. Decl. (ECF 53-4) ¶¶ 3-4; ImmDef Supp. Decl. (ECF 53-5) ¶ 8. The unaccompanied children to whom Plaintiffs would normally have provided representation are instead facing immigration court proceedings without counsel. See, e.g., GHIRP Supp. Decl. (ECF 53-2) ¶¶ 4-7. Consequently, “[t]his means that children who want voluntary departure will have their return home unacceptably delayed, [and] victims of trafficking will not be able to access the protections they deserve[.]” ImmDef Decl. (ECF 7-8) ¶ 25.

D. Procedural History

Plaintiffs brought this lawsuit against the Government on the bases that the Cancellation Order (1) violates the TVPRA, (2) conflicts with the Foundational Rule, and (3) constitutes an “arbitrary and capricious” agency action, each of which gives rise to a claim for violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”), 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A). Compl. ¶¶ 127-46.

On March 27, 2025, Plaintiffs filed a motion for temporary restraining order (“TRO”) and preliminary injunction. ECF 7. The Court issued an order setting a hearing, as well as a deadline for the Government’s written response to Plaintiffs’ TRO motion. ECF 17. On March 31, 2025, in accordance with the schedule set on March 27, the Government filed its opposition to Plaintiffs’ motion. See ECF 24. On April 1, 2025, the parties appeared for a hearing on Plaintiffs’ motion. ECF 30.

After taking the matter under submission, the Court granted Plaintiffs’ motion, issued a TRO, and set an expedited briefing schedule on Plaintiffs’ request for a preliminary injunction. ECF 33. The TRO provided,

Defendants are ENJOINED from withdrawing the services or funds provided by the Office of Refugee Resettlement (“ORR”) as of March 20, 2025, under the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (“TVPRA”), 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5), and ORR’s Foundational Rule, 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(4), particularly ORR’s provision of funds for direct legal representation services to unaccompanied children. This injunction precludes cutting off access to congressionally appropriated funding for its duration.

ECF 33 at 7.

After the TRO grant, several motions were filed. Plaintiffs filed their motion for preliminary injunction (ECF 37), as well as two motions to enforce the TRO (ECF 40, ECF 53). The Government moved to dissolve the TRO (ECF 38) and for recusal of a district judge pursuant to Title 28 U.S.C. § 455 (ECF 47). Finding that consideration of the recusal motion constituted good cause, the Court extended the TRO for an additional 14 days in accordance with Federal

Rule of Civil Procedure 65(b)(2), set a briefing schedule on the recusal motion, and continued the hearing on Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction. See ECF 48. The Government sought to appeal the TRO following its extension. ECF 56. The Government additionally moved to stay the TRO pending that appeal. ECF 57.

Following complete briefing, this Court denied the Government's motion for recusal. ECF 69. A panel of the Ninth Circuit subsequently determined that the TRO was not appealable and dismissed the Government's appeal, see Cmty. Legal Servs. in East Palo Alto v. Dept. Health & Hum. Servs., Case No. 25-2358, Order (9th Cir. Apr. 18, 2025), rendering the Government's motion for a stay pending appeal (ECF 57) moot.¹ The Court denied the Government's motion to dissolve the TRO by written order dated April 21, 2025. ECF 75. At the time of writing, the TRO remains in effect.

II. DISCUSSION

Plaintiffs move for a preliminary injunction on much of the same reasoning underlying the TRO. The Government opposes on several bases. The Court first addresses the Government's arguments regarding threshold issues of standing and subject matter jurisdiction before turning to the merits of Plaintiffs' motion.

A. Plaintiffs' Standing

The Court understands the Government to challenge Plaintiffs' standing under two theories. First, the Government contends that Plaintiffs lack Article III standing to bring this lawsuit because Plaintiffs' purported harms are not redressable by a favorable ruling from this Court. Second, the Government contends that Plaintiffs fall outside the "zone of interests" necessary to bring their APA claims. Though not squarely challenged by Government, the Court first considers whether the Plaintiffs have adequately established organizational injury in fact in support of Article III standing and then takes up each of the Government's standing arguments in turn.

¹ The Government sought en banc review, which was denied. Cmty. Legal Servs. in E. Palo Alto v. United States Dept. of Health and Human Servs., No. 25-2358, 2025 WL 1203167, at *1 (9th Cir. Apr. 25, 2025).

1 1. Article III

2 Article III standing requires that a “plaintiff must have (1) suffered an injury in fact, 3 (2) that is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) that is likely to be 4 redressed by a favorable judicial decision.” Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 338 (2016).
5 “To establish injury in fact, a plaintiff must show that he or she suffered ‘an invasion of a legally 6 protected interest’ that is ‘concrete and particularized’ and ‘actual or imminent, not conjectural or 7 hypothetical.’ ” Id. at 338 (quoting Lujan v. Defs. of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992)).

8 a. Organizational Injury in Fact

9 “Organizations can assert standing on behalf of their own members, or in their own 10 right[.]” East Bay Sanctuary Covenant v. Biden, 993 F.3d 640, 662 (9th Cir. 2021) (“EBSC III”) 11 (citations omitted). “[A]n organization has direct standing to sue where it establishes that the 12 defendant’s behavior has frustrated its mission and caused it to divert resources in response to that 13 frustration of purpose.” Id. at 663; see also Havens Realty Corp. v. Coleman, 455 U.S. 363, 379 14 (1982); Fair Hous. of Marin v. Combs, 285 F.3d 899, 905 (9th Cir. 2002) (setting forth 15 organizational standing test of “frustration of mission” coupled with “diversion of resources”).
16 Organizational plaintiffs may also “demonstrate organizational standing” by showing that a 17 government policy “will cause them to lose a substantial amount of funding.” East Bay Sanctuary 18 Covenant v. Trump, 932 F.3d 742, 766-67 (9th Cir. 2018) (“EBSC I”).

19 Here, Plaintiffs establish that the Government’s conduct “has frustrated [their] mission and 20 caused [them] to divert resources in response to that frustration of purpose.” EBSC III, 993 F.3d 21 at 663. The organizations share the mission of ensuring persons in immigration proceedings, 22 including the uniquely vulnerable population of unaccompanied children, have legal 23 representation. See, e.g., FIRRP Supp. Decl. (ECF 37-5) ¶ 5 (“Since the Florence Project began 24 serving children in 2000, a central tenet of our mission has been that no child should have to stand 25 alone in court.”); NWIRP Decl. (ECF 7-10) ¶¶ 1-2 (Northwest Immigrant Rights Project “provides 26 legal services to unaccompanied immigrant children and youth” in accordance with its “mission to 27 promote justice by defending and advancing the rights of immigrants through direct legal services, 28 systemic advocacy, and community education.”); KIND Decl. (ECF 7-18) ¶ 1 (describing KIND’s “mission [to] ensur[e] that no child appears in immigration court without high-quality legal representation.”). Plaintiffs’ missions and ethical duties drive them to continue legal representation of unaccompanied children in immigration proceedings. By cancelling all funding for direct legal representation of unaccompanied children, the Government “perceptibly impair[s]” Plaintiffs’ ability to fulfill their shared organizational mission. See EBSC III, 993 F.3d at 663. Plaintiffs present significant evidence that unaccompanied children were not provided counsel following the Cancellation Order, leaving them unrepresented in immigration proceedings, subject to removal and/or unable to pursue desired relief. See, e.g., KIND Decl. ¶¶ 13-19; Estrella Supp. Decl. (ECF 40-2) ¶¶ 4-9. Plaintiffs thus satisfy the “frustration of mission” requirement for organizational standing as set forth by this circuit.

In addition to demonstrating a frustration of mission, Plaintiffs must also establish that the Government’s actions required them to divert resources that they would have spent in other ways. See Comite de Jornaleros de Redondo Beach v. City of Redondo Beach, 657 F.3d 936, 943 (9th Cir. 2011). Plaintiffs have needed to draw on funds intended for other organizational purposes to respond to the suddenly diminished funding resulting from the Government’s Cancellation Order. See, e.g., FIRRP Supp. Decl. (ECF 37-5) ¶ 3 (“Florence Project has continued to provide services to our clients, drawing on funding from other sources and fundraising to ensure that we are able to provide legal representation, pro bono placement and mentoring, additional legal services, court preparation, and friend of court services to unrepresented children in keeping with our mission for as long as we can responsibly financially manage to do so.”); NIJC Supp. Decl. (ECF 37-11) ¶ 3 (“Since the ORR funding ceased, NIJC was forced to temporarily shift staff members to work on other NIJC projects.”). Given the ways in which Plaintiffs have had to divert resources to adequately advocate for unaccompanied children, there can be little doubt that the Government’s conduct has “impaired [Plaintiffs’] ability to provide [legal] services” to unaccompanied children, and “there can be no question that the organization[s] ha[ve] suffered injury in fact.” Havens, 455 U.S. at 379; see also EBSC III, 993 F.3d at 663 (finding standing where new administrative rule

1 barring access to asylum procedures for certain migrants caused diversion of resources for 2 organizations formed to assist asylum seekers).²

3 b. Redressability

4 The Government asserts that Plaintiffs cannot satisfy Article III's requirements because 5 they cannot establish that a favorable ruling would redress their alleged injuries. See Opp. at 12-6 14. Redressability, the third element of Article III standing, demands that it "be likely, as opposed 7 to merely speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision." Lujan, 504 U.S.
8 at 561 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). Plaintiffs' burden to establish 9 redressability is "relatively modest." Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 171 (1997); Tucson v. City 10 of Seattle, 91 F.4th 1318, 1325 (9th Cir. 2024). "Plaintiffs need not demonstrate that there is a 11 guarantee that their injuries will be redressed by a favorable decision." Renee v. Duncan, 686 F.3d 12 1002, 1013 (9th Cir. 2012) (internal citation and quotation omitted). Rather, Plaintiffs need only 13 show that a favorable decision would result in a "change in a legal status," and that a "practical 14 consequence of that change would amount to a significant increase in the likelihood that the 15 plaintiff would obtain relief that directly redresses the injury suffered." Utah v. Evans, 536 U.S.
16 452, 464 (2002).

17 The Government argues that Plaintiffs' purported harms are not redressable because the 18 agencies hold no obligation to continue to fund the Plaintiff organizations. Opp. at 12-13.
19 However, this argument distorts Plaintiffs' claims as sounding in contract, an incorrect 20 characterization for reasons discussed in greater depth below. See Section II.B. Plaintiffs pursue 21 injunctive relief requiring the Government to ensure legal representation of unaccompanied 22 children in immigration proceedings. Plaintiffs concede that the Government can accomplish this 23 by means other than by paying for their services and, if the Government takes steps to ensure 24 direct representation through others, the harm Plaintiffs suffer in the form of providing

26 ² Though standing is not challenged on this basis, Plaintiffs likely also have standing to challenge 27 the Government's Cancellation Order because of the new and ongoing operational costs they 28 allege. City and Cnty. of San Francisco v. United States Citizenship and Immigration Servs., 944 F.3d 773, 787-88 (9th Cir. 2019). Plaintiffs have suffered near-immediate financial impacts, and they have thus made a sufficient showing of concrete and imminent economic injury. See, e.g., Estrella del Paso Decl. ¶ 13 (describing staff furloughs in response to Cancellation Order).

1 representation without payment or diverting resources would be alleviated. See Reply (ECF 63) at 2 14. The reinstatement of funding for direct representation to unaccompanied children increases 3 the likelihood that Plaintiffs will obtain relief, either through funding to continue their own 4 representations or an alternative plan providing legal representation to unaccompanied children 5 consistent with the TVPRA and the Foundational Rule. Id. The requested injunctive relief thus is 6 likely to ensure that the unaccompanied children have and maintain counsel, which will redress 7 the injury to Plaintiffs’ missions, and this is sufficient to establish standing.

8 2. APA – Zone of Interests

9 The Government avers that Plaintiffs fall outside the zone of interests to bring their APA 10 claims because the TVPRA was not enacted to protect service providers’ finances or operational 11 goals. See Opp at 7-6. The Government contends that Plaintiffs fall outside the zone of interests 12 because the organizations are not in the class of unaccompanied minors intended for the TVPRA’s 13 protections. Id. These arguments miss the mark.

14 “The breadth of the zone-of-interests test varies, depending on the provisions of law at 15 issue. Under the APA, the test is not especially demanding. The zone-of-interests analysis 16 forecloses suit only when a plaintiff’s interests are so marginally related to or inconsistent with the 17 purposes implicit in the statute that it cannot reasonably be assumed that Congress authorized that 18 plaintiff to sue.” EBSC III, 993 F.3d at 667 (citing Lexmark Int’l, Inc., v. Static Control 19 Components, Inc., 572 U.S. 118, 129 (2014)) (internal quotation marks omitted). “[B]ecause the 20 APA provides a cause of action only to those ‘suffering legal wrong because of agency action . . .
 21 within the meaning of a relevant statute,’ the relevant zone of interest is that of the” TVPRA. See 22 id. at 667.

23 Plaintiffs’ interests in ensuring TVPRA protections for unaccompanied children, including 24 direct representation legal services, is consistent with the TVPRA’s purpose of “[p]reventing the 25 trafficking of unaccompanied [noncitizen] children found in the United States by ensuring that 26 they are not repatriated into the hands of traffickers or abusive families, and are well cared for.”
 27 H.R. Rep. No. 110-430 at 35 (2007); see EBSC III, 993 F.3d at 668 (concluding that courts are 28 “not limited to considering the specific statute under which plaintiffs sued, but may consider any provision that helps [them] to understand Congress’ overall purposes in enacting the statute.”) (internal quotation marks omitted); see also EBSC I, 932 F.3d at 768 (finding organizational plaintiffs in the Immigration and Nationality Act’s zone of interests because their “interest in aiding immigrants seeking asylum is consistent with the INA’s purpose to establish the statutory procedure for granting asylum to refugees”) (internal quotation marks and alterations omitted). Under the TVPRA, the Government “shall ensure, to the greatest extent practicable[,] . . . that all unaccompanied [noncitizen] children who are or have been in the custody of the Secretary of [HHS] or the Secretary of Homeland Security . . . have counsel to represent them in legal proceedings” and that, “[t]o the greatest extent practicable, the Secretary of [HHS] shall make every effort to utilize the services of pro bono counsel[.]” 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5). Indeed, ORR contracted with Acacia Center, and Acacia in turn subcontracted with Plaintiffs to fill this role contemplated by the TVPRA. Plaintiffs fit within the zone of interests because their interests are congruent with the TVPRA’s and Foundational Rule’s beneficiaries, namely, unaccompanied children. Indeed, Plaintiffs’ missions align with Congress’s purpose in enacting the TVPRA, ensuring representation for unaccompanied children to prevent their trafficking and abuse. EBSC I, 932 F.3d at 768 (finding organizational plaintiffs in zone of interests where “Congress took steps to ensure that pro bono legal services of the type that the Organizations provide are available to” those protected by the relevant statutes). Given the zone of interests test for APA claims is not “especially demanding,” Lexmark, 572 U.S. at 130, the Court is persuaded that Plaintiffs have more than met their burden to show that their interests are “marginally related to” and “arguably within” the scope of the relevant statutes. See EBSC III, 993 F.3d at 668.

B. Subject Matter Jurisdiction (Tucker Act)

Having resolved the Government’s challenges to Plaintiffs’ standing, the Court turns to the Government’s argument that the Tucker Act requires Plaintiffs’ claims be brought in the Federal Court of Claims because they sound in contract, and thus this Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction. See Opp. at 8-11. The Government is mistaken.

The Tucker Act grants exclusive jurisdiction to the Court of Federal Claims over suits based on “any express or implied contract with the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 1491(a)(1).

1 However, “the mere fact that a court may have to rule on a contract issue does not, by triggering 2 some mystical metamorphosis, automatically transform an action . . . into one on the contract and 3 deprive the court of jurisdiction it might otherwise have.” Megapulse, Inc. v. Lewis, 672 F.2d 959, 4 968 (D.C. Cir. 1982). “Generally speaking, the Tucker Act does not permit the [Court of Federal 5 Claims] to grant equitable or declaratory relief.” N. Star Alaska v. United States, 9 F.3d 1430, 6 1432 (9th Cir. 1993). “Due to this limited remedial authority, a contract-based action falls within 7 the scope of the Tucker Act only if the plaintiff seeks money damages for the breach of a 8 government contract.” United Aeronautical Corp. v. United States Air Force, 80 F.4th 1017, 1026 9 (9th Cir. 2023) (emphasis in original). Nonetheless, the Supreme Court has long recognized that 10 “[t]he fact that a judicial remedy may require one party to pay money to another is not a sufficient 11 reason to characterize the relief as ‘money damages’ ” within the meaning of the APA’s and 12 Tucker Act’s jurisdictional limitations. Bowen v. Massachusetts, 487 U.S. 879, 893 (1988) 13 (holding that federal district courts, not the Court of Federal Claims, have jurisdiction to review 14 federal agency action such as the denial of reimbursements owed for Medicaid expenditures).

15 The Ninth Circuit has held that the Tucker Act “ ‘impliedly forbid[s]’ an APA action 16 seeking injunctive and declaratory relief only if that action is a ‘disguised’ breach-of-contract 17 claim.” United Aeronautical Corp., 80 F.4th at 1026 (citing Megapulse, 672 F.2d at 968). To 18 assess whether an APA claim is an improperly disguised contract claim, the court adopted the 19 same two-part test from the D.C. Circuit’s Megapulse decision, requiring assessment of (1) “the 20 source of the rights upon which the plaintiff bases its claims” and (2) “the type of relief sought (or 21 appropriate).” United Aeronautical Corp., 80 F.4th at 1026 (citing Doe v. Tenet, 329 F.3d 1135, 22 1141 (9th Cir. 2003)); see also Megapulse, 672 F.2d at 968. To assess the “source of rights” that 23 form the basis of a plaintiff’s claim, the Court must consider whether: (a) the plaintiff’s asserted 24 rights and the government’s purported authority arise from statute or contract; (b) the plaintiff’s 25 rights “exist[] prior to and apart from rights created under the contract”; and (c) the plaintiff 26 “seek[s] to enforce any duty imposed upon” the government “by the . . . relevant contracts to 27 which” the government “is a party.” Crowley Gov’t Servs., Inc. v. GSA, 38 F.4th 1099, 1107 28 (D.C. Cir. 2022) (internal quotations and citations omitted).

Here, the source of Plaintiffs’ claims is the APA. They aver that the Government’s refusal to fund direct representation for unaccompanied children violates the agencies’ obligations under the TVPRA and the Foundational Rule. They advance that the Government’s conduct gives rise to a claim under the APA as contradictory to law, another claim under the APA as contravening the agencies’ regulations, and a third claim under the APA for arbitrary and capricious acts. Plaintiffs assert no breach-of-contract claim for money damages. Indeed, although the Government repeatedly contends that Plaintiffs seek to enforce contractual rights, the contract underlying the Cancellation Order was between DOI and Acacia Center – these legal services providers were not parties to that contract and assert no rights related to that contract.³ Moreover, as discussed above, Plaintiffs’ asserted harms arise from the frustration of their mission and diversion of resources to ensure unaccompanied children have legal representation. Plaintiffs’ asserted rights do not rely on or arise from any contract, are not contract claims in disguise, and thus do not implicate the Tucker Act under the first prong of the Megapulse test.

Turning to the second prong, the type of relief sought, Plaintiffs seek “declaratory and injunctive relief” under the APA to prevent the Government from refusing to fund counsel for unaccompanied children. Their action does not seek money damages to compensate them for losses; instead, they seek an injunction and vacatur of the purportedly unlawful Cancellation Order. That such relief may result in the payment of money does not transform their claim into one for money damages. Cf. Bowen, 487 U.S. at 893. Plaintiffs could not obtain the injunctive relief they seek in the Court of Federal Claims, which “has no power to grant equitable relief[.]” Richardson v. Morris, 409 U.S. 464, 465 (1973). Because Plaintiffs seek injunctive relief rather than money damages, the claims do not implicate the Tucker Act under the second prong of the Megapulse test. Finally, Plaintiffs do not seek to enforce any duty imposed on the Government by a contract. The Government makes clear that the contract by which ORR funded direct representation of unaccompanied children was coming to a close by its own terms, potentially hampering any potential claim to enforce a duty under that contract. See Biswas Decl. (ECF 24-1) ¶ 11 (stating that the Government’s contract with Acacia was set to expire March 29, 2025). Plaintiffs’ claims for injunctive relief do not seek enforcement of any contractual duty; rather, they pursue enforcement of the TVPRA and the Foundational Rule. See Compl. ¶¶ 127-46. Because all of the Crowley Government Services factors indicate that Plaintiffs’ claims do not sound in contract, the Court rejects the Government’s argument that it lacks jurisdiction over this case.

The Government resists this conclusion by attempting to analogize this case to the Supreme Court’s recent order staying a different district court’s temporary restraining order in Department of Education v. California, 604 U.S. ----, 145 S. Ct. 966 (2025).⁴ In Department of Education, the state government plaintiffs brought an APA challenge to the Department of Education’s termination of contracts for the payment of certain educational grants to the respective states. Id., 145 S. Ct. at 968. The district court issued a TRO enjoining the Government from terminating the grants and requiring “the Government to pay out past-due grant obligations and to continue paying obligations as they accrue.” Id. The Supreme Court granted the Government’s request for a stay of the TRO on the basis that the district court “lacked jurisdiction to order the payment of money under the APA.” Id. The Court further held, based in significant part on the relief pursued by the state governments, that the Government would likely show the district court lacked jurisdiction over the contractual claims calling for payment, as those claims are committed to the Court of Federal Claims pursuant to the Tucker Act. Id. (citing 28 U.S.C. § 1491(a)(1)).

In the course of this litigation, this Court has already found Department of Education insufficient to warrant dissolution of the TRO. ECF 75. It adds that Department of Education is distinguishable from Plaintiffs’ APA claims related to the termination of funding for legal services for unaccompanied children in immigration proceedings. These Plaintiffs, in contrast to the state governments in Department of Education, are subcontractors lacking privity with the Government, ⁴ The Government earlier moved to dissolve the TRO in reliance on the same order from the Supreme Court’s emergency docket. See ECF 38. The Court denied the Government’s motion to dissolve the TRO. ECF 75. The Court’s earlier reasoning regarding the inapplicability of Department of Education remains applicable.

1 and they have no contractual rights to enforce. Moreover, though the Government regularly 2 characterizes their claims as nothing more than a money grab, the legal service providers do not 3 seek payout – they seek to ensure representation for unaccompanied children in immigration 4 proceedings, regardless of which lawyers provide it. Department of Education has no bearing here 5 given the lack of (1) contractual relationship or (2) contractual relief sought against the United 6 States by Plaintiffs, the two hallmarks of actions left to the jurisdiction of the Federal Court of 7 Claims.

8 For these reasons, Plaintiffs’ claims have no business before the Federal Court of Claims 9 and this Court has jurisdiction to consider Plaintiffs’ APA claims.

10 C. Preliminary Injunction

11 Having rejected the Government’s jurisdictional arguments, the Court next examines 12 whether Plaintiffs are entitled to the extraordinary relief they seek. To obtain preliminary 13 injunctive relief, the moving party must show: (1) a likelihood of success on the merits, (2) a 14 likelihood of irreparable harm to the moving party in the absence of preliminary relief, (3) the 15 balance of equities tips in the favor of the moving party, and (4) an injunction is in the public 16 interest. Winter v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). Where the government 17 is a party, courts merge the analysis of the final two Winter factors, the balance of equities and the 18 public interest. Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1092 (9th Cir. 2014) (citing 19 Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 435 (2009)). Courts “explore the relative harms to applicant and 20 respondent, as well as the interests of the public at large.” Barnes v. E-Sys., Inc. Grp. Hosp. Med.
 21 & Surgical Ins. Plan, 501 U.S. 1301, 1305 (1991) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).
 22 The Winter factors may be evaluated on a sliding scale, such that preliminary relief may be issued 23 when the moving party demonstrates “that serious questions going to the merits were raised and 24 the balance of hardships tips sharply in the plaintiff’s favor.” All. for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 25 632 F.3d 1127, 1134-35 (9th Cir. 2011) (citation omitted).

26 1. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

27 The APA establishes a “basic presumption of judicial review [for] one ‘suffering legal 28 wrong because of agency action.’ ” Dep’t of Homeland Sec. v. Regents of the Univ. of California,

591 U.S. 1, 16 (2020) (citation omitted). “The [APA] was adopted to provide, inter alia, that administrative policies affecting individual rights and obligations be promulgated pursuant to certain stated procedures so as to avoid the inherently arbitrary nature of unpublished ad hoc determinations.” Morton v. Ruiz, 415 U.S. 199, 232 (1974). To that end, “[t]he APA sets forth the procedures by which federal agencies are accountable to the public and their actions subject to review by the courts.” Franklin v. Massachusetts, 505 U.S. 788, 796 (1992). It authorizes judicial review for those “suffering legal wrong” or “adversely affected” by a “final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court.” 5 U.S.C. §§ 702, 704.⁵

The Government contends that Plaintiffs are unlikely to succeed on the merits of their APA claims because the provisions at issue leave discretion to the agencies that evades judicial review. The Court takes up this issue first, and after concluding the conduct at issue is not committed to Government discretion, it then considers the substance of Plaintiffs’ three APA claims. Though Plaintiffs’ need only show a likelihood of success on one claim to demonstrate likelihood of success in support of a preliminary injunction, the Court analyzes each of their claims.

a. Bar to Review

The Government argues that Title 5 U.S.C. § 701(a)(2) precludes judicial review of the Cancellation Order. Section 701(a)(2) provides an exception to the waiver of sovereign immunity found in Sections 702 and 706 of the APA. Under Section 701(a)(2), a court may not review an agency action if the “agency action is committed to agency discretion by law.” However, the Section 701(a)(2) waiver is a narrow exception.

An agency action “is committed to agency discretion by law” only “where a statute is drawn in such broad terms that in a given case there is no law to apply, and the court would have no meaningful standard against which to judge the agency’s exercise of discretion.” Webster v.

⁵ The parties do not appear to dispute that the Cancellation Order constitutes a final agency action for purposes of APA review. In the interest of thoroughness, the Court finds that the Cancellation Order is a final agency action as the Government has not indicated, much less evidenced, that it intends to take further steps in its decision-making process and, thus, the termination of funding leads to legal consequences. See Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 177-78 (1997).

1 Doe, 486 U.S. 592, 592 (1988); see Jajati v. United States Customs & Border Prot., 102 F.4th 2 1011, 1014 (9th Cir. 2024) (holding that the Section 701(a)(2) exception applies when “there is 3 truly no law to apply”). The Supreme Court requires courts to “read the exception in § 701(a)(2) 4 quite narrowly” such that it should apply only in “rare circumstances.” Weyerhaeuser Co. v. U.S.
 5 Fish & Wildlife Serv., 586 U.S. 9, 23 (2018) (quoting Lincoln v. Vigil, 508 U.S. 182, 191 (1993)).
 6 Even when Congress intended to create a wide zone within which decisions are committed to an 7 agency’s discretion, the agency still must meet “permissible statutory objectives.” Lincoln, 508 8 U.S. at 183.

9 In one of the few cases in which the Supreme Court applied the Section 701(a)(2) 10 exception, it held the exception applied in cases involving “agency decisions that courts have 11 traditionally regarded as unreviewable, such as the allocation of funds from a lump-sum 12 appropriation.” Weyerhaeuser, 586 U.S. at 23 (citing Lincoln, 508 U.S. at 191). In Lincoln, the 13 Court found the Indian Health Service’s particular use of funds from a “lump sum” grant was 14 committed to its discretion because “the very point of a lump-sum appropriation is to give an 15 agency the capacity to adapt to changing circumstances and meet its statutory responsibilities in 16 what it sees as the most effective or desirable way.” Lincoln, 508 U.S. at 192. That is, “a lump-17 sum appropriation reflects a congressional recognition that an agency must be allowed flexibility 18 to shift funds within a particular appropriation account so that the agency can make necessary 19 adjustments for unforeseen developments and changing requirements.” Id. at 193 (internal citation 20 omitted).

21 The Government argues that the appropriation for direct legal representation of 22 unaccompanied children at issue here mirrors the lump sum appropriation over which the Indian 23 Health Service maintained discretion to allocate funds in Lincoln. See Opp. at 11-12. But unlike 24 the appropriation in Lincoln, the TVPRA mandates direct legal representation, and Congress has 25 expressly appropriated funds for services required under the TVPRA, including direct 26 representation. See, e.g., Full-Year Continuing Appropriations and Extensions Act, 2025, Pub. L.
 27 119-4, Div. A Tit. I Sec. 1101(8) (2025); Further Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2024, Pub. L.
 28 118-47, Div. D Tit. I, 138 Stat. 460, 664-65 (2024); S. Rep. 118-84, at 169. The Government’s

1 cancellation of all funding for direct representation is not the type of judgment regarding how to 2 spend appropriated funds that is presumptively committed to agency discretion.

3 Beyond the appropriations question, the Court has several meaningful standards against 4 which to judge the agencies' discretion. Cf. Weyerhaeuser, 586 U.S. at 23. Indeed, the TVPRA 5 and the Foundational Rule provide "meaningful standards under which courts can review whether 6 [the Government] wielded its discretion in a permissible manner." Jajati, 102 F.4th at 1014. Both 7 the TVPRA and Foundational Rule include language describing the Government's obligations to 8 fund direct representation. See 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5) (HHS "shall ensure, to the greatest extent 9 practicable," that all unaccompanied children receive legal "counsel to represent them in legal 10 proceedings"); 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(4) (ORR "shall fund legal service providers . . . subject to 11 ORR's discretion and available appropriations"). Such statutory and regulatory language offers a 12 clear standard to assess the Government's actions; therefore, Section 701(a)(2) does not bar review 13 of the Government's actions in this case.

14 b. First Claim – Agency Action Not in Accordance with Law

15 The APA requires reviewing courts to "hold unlawful and set aside agency action . . .
16 found to be . . . not in accordance with law"; "contrary to constitutional right [or] power"; or "in 17 excess of statutory jurisdiction [or] authority." 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A)-(C). Plaintiffs argue that the 18 Government's termination of funding for direct legal representation violates the TVPRA. See 19 Mot. (ECF 37) at 11. The relevant subsection provides that the Government "shall ensure, to the 20 greatest extent practicable," that all unaccompanied children receive legal "counsel to represent 21 them in legal proceedings" and to "protect them from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking."
22 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5).⁶ By cancelling all funding for direct representation of unaccompanied 23

24 ⁶ The provision reads in full:

25 The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall ensure, to the 26 greatest extent practicable and consistent with section 292 of the 27 Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1362), that all 28 unaccompanied alien children who are or have been in the custody of the Secretary or the Secretary of Homeland Security, and who are not described in subsection (a)(2)(A), have counsel to represent them in legal proceedings or matters and protect them from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking. To the greatest extent

1 children and failing to ensure that the children receive counsel when funds remain available for 2 that purpose, Plaintiffs contend, the Government violates the express mandate of the TVPRA.

3 The Government asserts that the TVPRA “does not mandate government-funded legal 4 representation,” Opp (ECF 55) at 9, arguing Section 235 of the TVPRA merely “encourages” 5 HHS to ensure unaccompanied children have counsel “to the greatest extent practicable,” id. at 11.
6 The Court disagrees. Section 235 creates an affirmative obligation on the Government, requiring 7 the agencies “shall ensure” unaccompanied children have legal counsel “to the greatest extent 8 practicable.” 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5). There is no dispute that congressionally appropriated funds 9 for legal representation are available, making the provision of direct legal services “practicable,” 10 particularly in the absence of alternative methods to provide counsel. See Further Consolidated 11 Appropriations Act, 2024, Pub. L. 118-47, § 4, 130 Stat. 460, 461. The Government here 12 terminated all funding for direct legal services through its Cancellation Order, see Biswas Decl., 13 Ex. 2 (ECF 24-3), effectively eliminating direct representation for unaccompanied children.
14 Amica Supp. Decl. ¶ 8; VAAP Decl. (ECF 7-7) ¶¶ 20-21. While the Government posits that “ ‘to 15 the greatest extent practicable’ cannot reasonably be construed as a mandate for HHS to 16 unconditionally pay for direct immigration legal representation for all” unaccompanied children, 17 that is not what Plaintiffs seek nor what the TVPRA requires. Opp. at 15. The TVPRA’s proviso 18 that HHS “shall ensure” counsel to represent unaccompanied children “to the greatest extent 19 practicable” requires something more than zero expenditure where appropriated funds are 20 available and the agencies fail to show any effort to ensure representation through alternative 21 means. The Government violates the TVPRA by withholding funding for direct legal 22 representation entirely, with no supplemental plan to ensure unaccompanied children have legal 23 counsel “to the greatest extent practicable.” Cf. Pacito v. Trump, No. 2:25-CV-255-JNW, 2025 24 WL 655075, at *18 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 28, 2025) (finding that withholding congressionally

26
27 practicable, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make 28 every effort to utilize the services of pro bono counsel who agree to provide representation to such children without charge.

8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5).

appropriated funding for private service providers likely violated the APA and supported the grant of a preliminary injunction). On this basis, Plaintiffs show likelihood of success on their first APA claim.

c. Second Claim – Accardi Violation

Under the Accardi doctrine, “an administrative agency is required to adhere to its own internal operating procedures.” Church of Scientology of Cal. v. United States, 920 F.2d 1481, 1487 (9th Cir. 1990) (citing United States ex rel. Accardi v. Shaughnessy, 347 U.S. 260, 268 (1954)). In accordance with this principle, agencies must follow a regulation if they promulgate one. Nat’l Ass’n of Home Builders v. Norton, 340 F.3d 835, 852 (9th Cir. 2003). To establish an APA claim under the Accardi doctrine, Plaintiffs must show both that (1) the Government violated its own regulations, and (2) Plaintiffs suffer substantial prejudice as a result of that violation. See Al Otro Lado, Inc. v. Mayorkas, 2024 WL 4370577, at *8-9 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2024).

Here, Plaintiffs aver that the Government violated the Foundational Rule, under which “ORR shall fund legal service providers” “[t]o the extent ORR determines that appropriations are available and insofar as it is not practicable for ORR to secure pro bono counsel.” 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(4).⁷ The Government argues that interpreting the Foundational Rule to require

⁷ The provision reads in full:

Direct immigration legal representation services for unaccompanied children currently or previously under ORR care. To the extent ORR determines that appropriations are available, and insofar as it is not practicable for ORR to secure pro bono counsel, ORR shall fund legal service providers to provide direct immigration legal representation for certain unaccompanied children, subject to ORR’s discretion and available appropriations. Examples of direct immigration legal representation include, but are not limited to:

(i) For unrepresented unaccompanied children who become enrolled in ORR Unaccompanied Refugee Minor (URM) programs, provided they have not yet obtained immigration relief or reached 18 years of age at the time of retention of an attorney;

(ii) For unaccompanied children in ORR care who are in proceedings before EOIR, including unaccompanied children seeking voluntary departure, and for whom other available assistance does not satisfy the legal needs of the individual child;

(iii) For unaccompanied children released to a sponsor residing in the defined service area of the same legal service provider who continued funding of direct representation for unaccompanied children conflicts with Title 8 U.S.C. § 1362, which provides that the privilege of being represented by counsel in immigration proceedings shall be “at no expense to the Government.” See Opp. at 15. The Court finds no conflict between these two provisions. Section 1362 simply clarifies that Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335 (1963), does not extend to immigration proceedings – meaning persons subject to removal proceedings have a right to counsel, but that right does not require the Government to provide such counsel. The Foundational Rule does not conflict with Section 1362 because it does not create a substantive right to counsel at the expense of the Government. Instead, it creates an obligation for ORR to seek out direct representation counsel for unaccompanied children, including by securing pro bono counsel or utilizing appropriated funds when ORR is not able to secure pro bono counsel. It is undisputed that appropriations for direct representation remain available, and the Government has evidenced no effort to ensure pro bono counsel. Thus, the Government cannot invoke this perceived statutory conflict as a basis for failing to comply with its obligations under the Foundational Rule.

Changing tack, the Government next acknowledges the Foundational Rule obliges ORR to “fund legal service providers to provide direct immigration legal representation for certain unaccompanied children,” but emphasizes the discretion ORR retains, as the obligation to fund exists only “to the extent ORR determines that appropriations are available,” and only if securing pro bono counsel is impractical. 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(4). The Government contrasts this provision to other subsections that leave ORR no discretion. For instance, the Foundational Rule explicitly requires ORR to ensure unaccompanied children receive mandatory services such as a “presentation concerning the rights and responsibilities of undocumented children,” “information regarding the availability of free legal assistance,” and a “confidential legal consultation.” 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(2)(i)-(v). According to the Government, this intentional distinction clarifies provided the child legal services in ORR care, to promote continuity of legal services; and

(iv) For other unaccompanied children, to the extent ORR determines that appropriations are available.

45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(4).

1 that direct funding for legal representation remains discretionary, conditional upon the availability 2 of appropriations, and subject to agency determination.

3 Even so, the Government’s argument does not address Plaintiffs’ claim. The Government 4 may be right that it retains some modicum of discretion related to how direct representation legal 5 services are provided and to what degree the Government funds them; however, the Cancellation 6 Order contravenes the Foundational Rule. The termination of all direct representation funding is 7 incompatible with the Foundational Rule’s requirement that the agency “shall fund” direct 8 representation so long as funds remain available and pro bono legal services are not secured. The 9 Government proffers no evidence that it found pro bono counsel or even sought out alternative 10 representation for the unaccompanied children. Plaintiffs are prejudiced by the Government’s 11 failure to comply with the Foundational Rule because they are inhibited in their ability to fulfill 12 their missions of ensuring representation for unaccompanied children. See Section II.A.1.a, above.
13 The Government’s Cancellation Order thus violates the Foundational Rule, and Plaintiffs have 14 shown a likelihood of success on their APA claim under the Accardi doctrine.

15 d. Third Claim – Arbitrary and Capricious Agency Action

16 “[T]he touchstone of ‘arbitrary and capricious’ review under the APA is ‘reasoned 17 decisionmaking.’ ” Altera Corp. & Subsidiaries v. Comm’r, 926 F.3d 1061, 1080 (9th Cir. 2019) 18 (quoting Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass’n of U.S., Inc. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 463 U.S. 29, 19 52 (1983)). “[A]n agency’s action can only survive arbitrary or capricious review where it has 20 articulate[d] a satisfactory explanation for its action including a rational connection between the 21 facts found and the choice made.” Alliance for the Wild Rockies v. Petrick, 68 F.4th 475, 493 (9th 22 Cir. 2023) (citing Altera Corp. & Subsidiaries, 926 F.3d at 1080). “Although we may uphold a 23 decision of less than ideal clarity if the agency’s path may reasonably be discerned, we may not 24 infer an agency’s reasoning from mere silence.” Arrington v. Daniels, 516 F.3d 1106, 1112 (9th 25 Cir. 2008) (citations and quotation marks omitted). As the Supreme Court has elucidated, “[a]n 26 agency may not, for example, depart from a prior policy sub silentio or simply disregard rules that 27 are still on the books. And of course the agency must show that there are good reasons for the 28 new policy,” even though it need not convince the court of the merits of its new policy. FCC v.

Fox Television Stations, Inc., 556 U.S. 502, 515 (2009) (internal citation omitted). Also, where an agency action rescinds a prior policy, the agency must show that it gave due consideration to “serious reliance interests.” Id. at 515; see also Dep’t of Homeland Sec. v. Regents of the Univ. of California, 591 U.S. at 30 (“[W]hen an agency rescinds a prior policy its reasoned analysis must consider the ‘alternative[s]’ that are ‘within the ambit of the existing [policy].’ ”).

Here, only two documents are proffered to provide insight into the Government’s change in position – the February 3, 2025 Secretarial Directive and the March 21, 2025 Cancellation Order. See Biswas Decl., Ex. 1 (ECF 24-2) & Ex. 2 (ECF 24-3).⁸ Neither of the documents contemplates any alternatives to the existing policy of funding legal services providers for direct representation. Cf. Regents, 591 U.S. at 30. Neither of the documents finds any facts that would support the decision to terminate all funding, nor do they draw a rational connection between any facts considered and the decision made “for the Government’s convenience.” Biswas Decl., Ex. 2 (ECF 24-3). Rather, the Government identifies, for the first time in its opposition, a handful of rationales for the decision to terminate funding for direct legal services, including “sustainability” and “fiscal constraints.” The Government contends that “ORR’s rationale, focusing on legal orientation and screenings to ensure all UAC receive basic legal information, while trusting that pro bono resources (supplemented by post-release services and child advocates in special cases) will provide representation in meritorious cases, is a rational strategy to fulfill its statutory obligations in a sustainable way.” Opp. at 17; see also Opp. at 17-18 (alternatively detailing the rationale, without supporting citation, as “aligning with the TVPRA’s pro bono preference, addressing fiscal constraints, and rebalancing priorities to ensure core legal orientation and screening services reach all” unaccompanied children). None of these rationales are evidenced in the record. Neither of the agency documents in evidence refers to “legal orientation and screenings” as a policy course to replace direct legal representation. Moreover, those legal services are separately required by the Foundational Rule. See 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(2) (enumerating a panoply of services an “unaccompanied child in ORR’s legal custody child shall receive”). The Government’s interpretation essentially reads the direct legal representation contemplated in (a)(4) out of the Foundational Rule. Further, neither of the agency documents in evidence refers to pro bono resources as a replacement for the direct legal representation available by use of congressionally earmarked funds.⁹ “It is a foundational principle of administrative law that judicial review of agency action is limited to the grounds that the agency invoked when it took the action.” Regents, 591 U.S. at 20 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). The Government’s attempt to make up for its failure to provide meaningful explanation for the funding termination amounts to post hoc rationalization via attorney argument. This is insufficient to overcome the Government’s failure to proffer any competent evidence of reasoned decision making. Though the Government characterizes this litigation as “a disagreement over policy,” Opp. at 19, the agencies have failed to identify any reasoned policy with which Plaintiffs could disagree – there are no materials showing even the “minimal level of analysis” required under the APA. See Encino Motorcars, LLC v. Navarro, 579 U.S. 211, 212 (2016). On this record, the Court finds that Plaintiffs show a likelihood of success on their third APA claim for arbitrary and capricious agency action.

⁸ The Government has so far refused to produce any administrative record to justify the funding termination decision until it files its answer. Amica Supp. Decl. (ECF 37-15) ¶ 13. Moreover, though the Government argues that “the administrative record here reflects a reasoned decision,” Opp. at 17, when pressed at the preliminary injunction hearing about the administrative record in this case, the Government conceded that its briefs should refer instead to “record evidence” in the absence of an administrative record. Hr’g Tr. (ECF 83) at 22-23.

2. Irreparable Harm

Beyond establishing a likelihood of success of the merits, plaintiffs seeking a preliminary injunction must show that they are likely to suffer irreparable harm without preliminary relief. Winter, 555 U.S. at 20. “Irreparable harm is traditionally defined as harm for which there is no adequate legal remedy, such as an award of damages.” Arizona Dream Act Coal. v. Brewer, 757 F.3d 1053, 1068 (9th Cir. 2014) (citation omitted). A “showing of a mere possibility of ⁹ Because the exclusive use of pro bono attorneys to replace government-funded direct representation does not find any support in the record, the Court does not reach the parties’ further dispute regarding the viability of relying exclusively on pro bono counsel to represent unaccompanied children. See Opp. at 19; Reply at 12; see also Amicus Br. Former HHS Officials (ECF 78) at 7-9 (describing impracticability of replacing funded direct representation with pro bono counsel).

1 irreparable harm is not sufficient under Winter.” Earth Island Inst. v. Carlton, 626 F.3d 462, 468 2 (9th Cir. 2010).

3 Here, Plaintiffs have shown that they are likely to suffer, if not already suffering, 4 irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief. The Government’s termination of funding 5 has impacted Plaintiffs, forcing them to issue layoff notices and threatening to require them to 6 dismiss their specialized and seasoned attorneys. See GHIRP Decl. (ECF 53-2) ¶ 3 (describing the 7 layoff of eight staff members due to the Cancellation Order’s termination of funding). As the 8 Court noted in its standing analysis, the Cancellation Order prevents Plaintiffs from providing 9 thousands of unaccompanied children with the direct representation required by the TVPRA and 10 the Foundational Rule, frustrating Plaintiffs’ missions of ensuring unaccompanied children are 11 supported by legal counsel. See, e.g., Estrella del Paso Supp. Decl. (ECF 53-4) ¶¶ 3-4; ImmDef 12 Supp. Decl. (ECF 53-5) ¶ 8. Given these harms, the Plaintiff organizations “have established a 13 likelihood of irreparable harm” based on their showing of serious “ongoing harms to their 14 organizational missions,” including diversion of resources and the non-speculative loss of 15 substantial funding. Valle del Sol Inc. v. Whiting, 732 F.3d 1006, 1029 (9th Cir. 2013). The 16 Government’s repetition of its arguments against standing fail to persuade. The irreparable harm 17 resulting from the Government’s Cancellation Order weighs in favor of a preliminary injunction.

18 3. Balance of Equities and Public Interest

19 In deciding whether to grant an injunction, “courts must balance the competing claims of 20 injury and must consider the effect on each party of the granting or withholding of the requested 21 relief.” Disney Enters., Inc. v. VidAngel, Inc., 869 F.3d 848, 866 (9th Cir. 2017) (quoting Winter, 22 555 U.S. at 24). Courts “explore the relative harms to applicant and respondent, as well as the 23 interests of the public at large.” Barnes v. E-Sys., Inc. Grp. Hosp. Med. & Surgical Ins. Plan, 501 24 U.S. 1301, 1305 (1991) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Where the government is 25 a party, the balance of equities and public interest factors merge. Drakes Bay Oyster Co., 747 26 F.3d at 1092 (citing Nken, 556 U.S. at 435).

27 When the Court issued the TRO, it concluded that these third and fourth Winter factors 28 supported enjoining the Cancellation Order. See ECF 33 at 5-6. The Court’s reasoning remains

1 intact. The record reveals substantial, immediate, and ongoing harms to the Plaintiff 2 organizations. But further, as amici make clear, the risk of substantial harm to unaccompanied 3 children as a result of not receiving counsel further weighs in favor of injunctive relief. One group 4 of amici, including civil rights legal organizations that represent detained immigrant children, 5 details the important role that direct legal service providers play in recognizing and combatting the 6 potential mistreatment of unaccompanied children in ORR custody. See Amicus Br. of National 7 Center for Youth Law et al. (ECF 79). Another group of amici, former HHS officials, warns that 8 unaccompanied children lacking counsel face greater risk of exploitation and human trafficking.
 9 Amicus Br. of Former HHS Officials (ECF 78) at 5. Such harms weigh in favor of injunctive 10 relief. The Government avers that it would suffer harm where executive branch authority is 11 hindered, Opp. at 21-22, but the Government cites no authority that this is a factor properly 12 considered. Id. at 22. Indeed, the Government's argument fails to address the equities of granting 13 an injunction and instead merely reasserts its position that the Cancellation Order violates neither 14 the TVPRA nor the Foundational Rule. The public interest is not served by maintaining agency 15 actions that conflict with federal law and federal agencies' own regulations. Valle del Sol, 732 16 F.3d at 1029 (no legitimate government interest in violating federal law). Because the Court has 17 concluded that the Cancellation Order likely violates the APA, the balance of equities and the 18 public interest both tip decisively in Plaintiffs' favor.

19 4. Bond

20 The Government requests that the Court require Plaintiffs to post a bond as security for 21 damages that may result from a wrongfully-granted injunction. Opp. at 24. In granting relief 22 under Rule 65, "[t]he court has discretion to dispense with the security requirement, or to request 23 mere nominal security, where requiring security would effectively deny access to judicial 24 review." People of State of Cal. ex rel. Van De Kamp v. Tahoe Reg'l Plan. Agency, 766 F.2d 25 1319, 1325 (9th Cir. 1985). As result of the Cancellation Order, the Plaintiff organizations are 26 unable to pay their staff and are laying some of them off. See e.g., MIRC Decl. (ECF 37-10) ¶ 4.
 27 Based on this record, the Court finds that requiring a bond would stifle Plaintiffs' enforcement of 28 their rights under the APA. Because this litigation is brought by nonprofit organizations to protect

1 the public interest and ensure compliance with federal law, the Court declines the Government's 2 request.

3 5. Scope of Relief

4 The Government argues that any injunctive relief granted by the Court must be narrowly 5 tailored to address only the harm suffered by these Plaintiffs and may not extend nationwide. See 6 Opp. at 25. Under the APA, however, courts are required to “hold unlawful and set aside” agency 7 action found to be invalid such that the challenged agency action no longer applies to anyone, not 8 just the plaintiffs at bar. 5 U.S.C. § 706(2). Indeed, appropriate relief for successful plaintiffs in 9 APA cases may necessarily reach nationwide. See, e.g., Regents, 591 U.S. at 9 (holding that the 10 rescission of a major federal program “must be vacated”); see also Lujan, 497 U.S. at 913 11 (Blackmun, J., dissenting) (“[I]f the plaintiff prevails, the result is that the rule is invalidated, not 12 simply that the court forbids its application to a particular individual.”).

13 The Ninth Circuit has consistently recognized “the authority of district courts to enjoin 14 unlawful immigration policies on a universal basis.” Regents of the Univ. of Cal. v. Dep’t of 15 Homeland Sec., 908 F.3d 476, 511 (9th Cir. 2018) (citation omitted) (“A final principle is also 16 relevant: the need for uniformity in immigration policy.”); Hawaii v. Trump, 878 F.3d 662, 701 17 (9th Cir. 2017), rev’d on other grounds, 585 U.S. 667 (2018) (“Because this case implicates 18 immigration policy, a nationwide injunction was necessary to give Plaintiffs a full expression of 19 their rights.”); Washington v. Trump, 847 F.3d 1151, 1166-67 (9th Cir. 2017) (“[A] fragmented 20 immigration policy would run afoul of the constitutional and statutory requirement for uniform 21 immigration law and policy.” (citing Texas v. United States, 809 F.3d 134, 187-88 (5th Cir.
22 2015))). “Such relief is commonplace in APA cases, promotes uniformity in immigration 23 enforcement, and is necessary to provide the plaintiffs here with complete redress.” Regents of the 24 Univ. of Cal. v. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 908 F.3d at 512.

25 In this case, there is no practical way to limit injunctive relief relating to immigration law 26 and policy by party or by geography. Indeed, as discussed with the Government’s declarants at 27 the preliminary injunction hearing, there exists only one contract for the provision of the subject 28 funding, and it applies to direct legal services nationwide. See Hr’g Tr. at 8-9. Moreover, the Government fails to identify any way to limit injunctive relief only to these Plaintiffs. Nor would such fractured relief prove effective at addressing the scope of the Government's likely violation of the APA. The Government's Cancellation Order had nationwide effect; the relief necessary to remedy the termination is for the Court to set aside that termination and require the Government to comply with its statutory and regulatory obligations. Therefore, the relief granted by the Court must reach nationwide.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court GRANTS Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction. The Court ORDERS as follows:

Defendants are ENJOINED from withdrawing the services or funds provided by the Office of Refugee Resettlement ("ORR") as of March 20, 2025, under the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 ("TVPRA"), 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5), and ORR's Foundational Rule, 45 C.F.R. § 410.1309(a)(4), particularly ORR's provision of funds for direct legal representation services to unaccompanied children. This injunction precludes cutting off access to congressionally appropriated funding for its duration.

This injunction takes effect immediately, replacing the Court's April 1, 2025 temporary restraining order (ECF 33), and will remain in place until a final judgment on Plaintiffs' claims. Defendants shall file a status report by no later than 2:00 p.m. PST, Friday, May 2, 2025, to report on compliance with the injunction. Additional status reports regarding compliance with the injunction shall be filed no later than 2:00 p.m. PST, on May 9 and 23, 2025, and every 45 days thereafter. This Order shall apply to the maximum extent provided for by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65(d)(2) and 5 U.S.C. §§ 705 and 706. Non-compliance or delayed compliance may result in a contempt finding and sanctions.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
